

JOB DESCRIPTION

Residential Buildings Program Manager

The Governor's Energy Office (GEO) is seeking qualified candidates for a Residential Buildings Program Manager. This position will lead the GEO's energy efficiency and renewable energy efforts in the residential buildings sector.

Governor Bill Ritter, Jr. has articulated a strong vision for Colorado's New Energy Economy, a vision with progressive economic, environmental, and energy goals. The mission of the GEO is to advance the New Energy Economy in Colorado. Improving the efficiency of the state's residential buildings and increasing the use of renewable energy at the residential level is a cornerstone of this vision.

In collaboration with the GEO staff, the Residential Buildings Program Manager will set the direction for the state as it pertains to residential building programs including new construction, building codes and existing housing efficiency. This position will help communities identify opportunities for building efficiency and the use of renewables in their existing housing stock, as well as opportunities for programs that can influence the efficiency of new construction. Advancing Colorado's building codes is also an essential component of this position.
